and
Winter Orchid Display in the
Tropical House

Announcement

This weekend - Tidewater Orchid Society Show & Sale
Friday, March 27, 2015 through Sunday, March 29, 2015.

NORFOLK, VA –Join us for the Tidewater Orchid Society Show & Sale this weekend in the Garden's Baker Hall showroom. Purchase an orchid at the show & sale and visit the 2nd annual Winter Orchid Display NOW through Sunday, March 29, 2015 from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily. Visit Norfolk Botanical Garden's (NBG) warm tropical house and feel like you have traveled to the tropics. Many of the orchids were provided by the Tidewater Orchid Society and Old Dominion University (ODU) - Arthur and Phyllis Kaplan Orchid Conservatory and Research Greenhouse. These blooming beauties are nestled throughout the tropical display house.

Bring your camera and take time to explore!

There are more than 150 blooming plants - beautiful colors and varieties of orchids you won't want to miss!

The NBG Director of Horticulture Brian O'Neill says he doesn't have just one favorite. "I especially love the hybrid varieties with all of the stunning color and unique detail," he said. "This is a special exhibit and we are thrilled to have a special partnership with ODU and the Tidewater Orchid Society."

Discover the warmth of the NBG Tropical Display House and enjoy the beauty of orchids. The House also features a wide variety of interesting plants including begonias, gingers, palms and a large number of bromeliads. Though most of these plants are not hardy to this region, they thrive in the tropical rainforests around the world. No need to travel, NBG is bringing the tropics to you!

This exhibit is FREE with paid Garden admission. Click here for more information.

Fun Fact: Orchids are the largest group of flowering plants and are found everywhere except Antarctica.
