NORFOLK, VA – Tired of the cold weather? Visit Norfolk Botanical Garden's (NBG) warm tropical house and feel like you have traveled to the tropics. The Garden has a special visitor - Orchids! The NEW Winter Orchid Display is NOW open through March 30, 2014 from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily. Many of the orchids were provided by the Tidewater Orchid Society and Old Dominion University (ODU) - Arthur and Phyllis Kaplan Orchid Conservatory and Research Greenhouse. These blooming beauties are nestled throughout the tropical display house.

Bring your camera and take time to explore!

There are more than 150 blooming plants - beautiful colors and varieties of orchids you won't want to miss!

The NBG Director of Horticulture Brian O'Neill says he doesn't have just one favorite. "I especially love the hybrid varieties with all of the stunning color and unique detail," he said. "This is a special exhibit and we are thrilled to have a special partnership with ODU and the Tidewater Orchid Society."

Discover the warmth of the NBG Tropical Display House and enjoy the beauty of winter orchids.

This winter exhibit is included with regular Garden admission. Mark your calendar for the upcoming Tidewater Orchid Society Show & Sale beginning Friday, March 28, 2014 through Sunday, March 30, 2014.
